

TAKING PART THROUGH SOCIAL MEDIA

The Great Business Debate gives you the opportunity to get your view across, share interesting articles, and talk to us and other people about business.

Follow the conversation online

The Great Business Debate social media channels will share content from this website and comments, replies and questions on these are encouraged. Please follow us on Twitter @bizdebate to stay up-to-date.

The hashtag #bizdebate can also be used across social media channels to make contributions to the debate and look out for specific hashtags that relate to events and other occurrences at different times.

Share content that interests you

All articles, case studies and other pieces on this website can be shared directly through your own social media accounts using the sharing icons that are next to each piece. Please feel free to share any content from this website on the channels you use and add your own comments.

Add your voice to the conversation

If you have something on your website or blog (a written piece, a video etc.) that you think is relevant and helps contribute to the debate about the value of business to the UK then please share online through your own accounts and use our hashtag (#bizdebate). We will look out for the best relevant content and use it wherever appropriate.

We welcome a range of views and perspectives but we won't engage with anyone who is:

- Offensive or portraying extreme views
- Overly critical of specific organisations or individuals
- Presenting content as an advert, an overt sales or marketing message for their organisation

For any further information, please contact info@greatbusinessdebate.co.uk.